

WorldMontana®: Center for Diplomacy and Leadership is an affiliate of the National Council for International Visitors (NCIV) based in Washington, D.C. We are one of 92 community-based non-profit centers throughout the United States that helps facilitate the International Visitor Leadership Program sponsored by the U.S. Department of State. In Montana, we host approximately 150 international leaders through this and other programs each year. The program participants are international leaders in the fields of environmental affairs, local government, media, education, human rights, law, E-commerce, management of non-profit organizations, livestock & wildlife management and foreign affairs.

Through the environmental subtheme, IYLEP participants will explore how the individuals and government, as well as advocacy groups affect environmental policy and ecology both on a local and global scale. Participants will learn about the environmental history of Montana's mining city, Butte, the mining area around Helena and explore land preservation history and US Forest Service work in order to understand broader environmental issues such as environmental justice, political influence on environment and pollution. The group will also participate in hands-on workshops that will give them skills in educational outreach, service project planning, and advocacy. Through reflection and discussion participants will analyze how these broader social and environmental processes function in their own communities and develop ideas and skills they can use at home.

12:30 AM Butte and mining discussion LUNCH at pizza place downtown.

2:00 PM Tour of Berkeley Pit.

You will discuss how years of the mining presence in Butte has negatively impacted the natural environment. The pit is the site of a former mining operation. After the mine was closed in the 1950s, Berkeley Pit began to fill up with toxic water from the old copper mine. It is closely monitored, as it is a threat to potable water. The Berkeley Pit is on the federal Superfund site list. The Montana experience will be tied into the possible Iraqi water and mining issues.

Meeting with Field Coordinator Abby Peltoma of the Clark Fork Watershed Education Program at the Silver Bow Creek to discuss the local species that call this aquatic habitat home, the impact of environmental degradation, and what can be done in the aftermath. From the discovery of gold on Silver Bow Creek, the primary headwater creek for the Clark Fork River, in the 1860s, the Clark Fork River and surrounding ecosystems have been heavily impacted by mining and smelting. The Silver Bow Creek mine was heavily affected by mining activity and reduced to a river of toxic chemicals. Through intense restorative activities from State and local interest groups, the Silver Bow Creek has been restored somewhat to its natural state and is an example of the power of intervention and restoration through governmental avenues.

We will be collecting soil and water data with the water quality and aquatic macroinvertebrate station equipment. After that, we will go to a restored site so that everyone can see first-hand how dramatically an area can change. This tour will help students to see before and after results and how they might use this information to shape a similar project of their own. (GOAL 1)
